

WILDLIFE PRESERVATION CANADA CANADA'S NEW NOAHS INSTRUCTIONS FOR REFERENCES

Wildlife Preservation Canada's mission is to save animal species at risk from extinction in Canada

Since 1988, Wildlife Preservation Canada has selected one graduate student from across Canada to become our next Canada's New Noah. The full scholarship includes travel, living and training expenses to enable the New Noah to participate in the Durrell Post-Graduate Diploma in Endangered Species Recovery (March – Oct, 2019) designed to provide the field experience and species and human resource management skills required to be able to run wildlife conservation projects. Based exclusively on the island of Mauritius (Indian Ocean) this course consists of four weeks of intensive theory and more than 12 weeks of practical experience with species and habitat recovery teams saving species on Mauritius and its offshore islands.

Applicants require letters of reference from three references to complete their application package. All referees should be either academic (instructors, supervisors) or employers. These comments are vital to the applicant selection process.

2. The candidate's reliability, maturity and willingness to do the "dirty work" and/or more mundane work associated with animal care, research and field work.
3. The candidate's initiative, enthusiasm and self-motivation.
4. Their ability to work with others (at times in very close quarters).
5. If you are the applicant's employer and/or are likely to be responsible for the applicant's future employment, what role do you see the applicant playing in implementing any desirable changes after completion of the New Noah training?
6. The areas of the applicant's strength or weakness that you think are appropriate to pursuing this rigorous training program and/or the applicant's future work with animals and conservation.
7. Would you recommend this applicant for the Canada's New Noahs program?
